Before You Write a Single Word: The Pre-Nup Checklist for Grantwriting

DECEMBER 2, 2009

11:00 AM - NOON

You've identified a prospect that seems like a match for your program, and now you are poised to begin writing your grant. But the difference between a winning and losing proposal may well hinge on what you do before you type that first word.

Participants will be introduced to screening grantmakers and organizing the grant, including:

- Steps to determine if the grantmaker is a strong match
• Researching the grantmaker's giving patterns
• Building relationships with potential funders
• Developing your project idea into a plan
• Forging partnerships and collaborations during the planning process
• Reviewing guidelines and requests for proposals
• Organizing the grantwriting process
